ROCK SAND TO GO TO FRANCE

FAMOUS $125,000 THOROUGHBRED STALLION TO LEAVE AMERICA COMING FALL.

August Belmont Announces Lease of Breeding Qualities of Great Son of Sainfoin to a French Syndicate Headed by Cheri Halbroum.

New York, July 8.—August Belmont today admitted that he has given Cheri Halbroum, head of a French syndicate, an option on his stallion Rock Sand, for breeding purposes, in the interest of French and American turfmen. The price to be paid was not made known, but it is a fact that he was given $125,000 to lease Rock Sand for a year for two years, made by the agent of an English breeding company. It is assumed, therefore, that the French agent has offered at least $400,000 a year for at least two years.

It could not be ascertained how long Mr. Belmont will permit Rock Sand to remain in France. Mr. Belmont has at his breeding farm there thirty mares and the stallions Ethelbert and Flint Rock. One reason given for Mr. Belmont permitting Rock Sand to go to France is because any progeny of the horse would be eligible to all French races, whereas those sired by him in America or England would be eligible to only a few French races.

Rock Sand is now twelve years old and his progeny have been stakes winners in France, England and America during the past two or three seasons. As a three-year-old Rock Sand won for his owner, Sir James Miller, the three English classics—Two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St. Leger—and after the death of his owner had put the horse on the market, Mr. Belmont paid $125,000 for him and located him in Kentucky for breeding purposes, where he stood for the unprecedented fee of $1,500. Rock Sand is by Sainfoin, out of Roquebrune.

It is understood that Rock Sand will go to France in late September or early October.

THIRTY LEADING AMERICAN JOCKEYS.

Since the last publication of the list of thirty leading American jockeys, the chief changes have been the advancing of T. Koerner and Hill to fifth and sixth places, respectively, and the supplanting of Ferguson and Selden by Fairbrother and Borel for minor positions in the list. The record of the thirty leaders from January 1, to and including the racing of Saturday last, is as follows:

GROWING INTEREST IN THE MUTUELLES.

Taking Daily Racing Form's recent article on record-breaking odds in the pari-mutuels for a text, the Chicago Inter-Ocean makes the following editorial comment:

"There is much public interest in the working of the mutuel system of wagering at race tracks, for the reason that if the American turf is ever restored to good standing, the mutuel machines will replace the bookmaker. The activities of the professional layer of odds are really at the bottom of the crusade that has driven our leading turfmen and our best horses to foreign countries—men like Belmont, Duryea, Whitney, Wilson and Hildreth and their stables to Canada, England and France."

The mutuel system simplified itself. Every wagering goes into three pools—one to win, one to run second and one to run third. After the race those who bet on the winners divide the pools among them in proportion to the amount each wagered. The machine does the figuring, the clerks handle the money and the winning bettor presents his ticket and gets his cash—minus the small percentage kept out for the expense of running the machine. The race track management provides the machines and the clerks and guarantees the whole operation.

"Thus the spectators bet against one another and make their own prices, without the interference of the professional. The favorite, of course, will be the horse on which most of the bettors buy tickets. The longest-priced horse will be the one on which the least number buy tickets."

INVESTIGATION OF BREEDING IS ON.

Albany, N. Y., July 8.—Commissioner Huson of the State Department of Agriculture is arranging for an investigation of horse breeding for the purpose of stimulating and promoting the industry in New York State.

Examinations are to be made of the conditions under which horses of various types are produced elsewhere. Conditions throughout the state are to be studied with a view of ascertaining what classes of horses can be more profitably produced in any given locality, taking into consideration the principal conditions in such localities and the practicability of establishing breeding stations for horses of various types in most demand in the state is about to be considered.

HOW E. R. BRADLEY GOT INTO RACING.

Chance has thrown many a man into the racing game, and it was chance that started E. R. Bradley on his successful racing career. Like many others who have come into the sport, it was in quest of health. Many years ago Mr. Bradley was in business in small way when his health failed. His physician prescribed the opium treatment and declared he best be shot to take the treatment. It got the patient up early in the morning and kept him occupied until almost the noon hour. Then, if he

STATISTICS OF THE FORT ERIE MEETING

The first of the 1912 meetings of the Niagara Racing Association, which opened at Fort Erie, Ont., June 29 and came to a close July 6, embraced the customary seven days, during which fifty races were run and $32,330 was distributed in stakes and purses, including the satisfying average of $4,618.57. T. C. McDowell, who shipped his stable from Kentucky for the meeting, was far and away the most successful of the money-winning owners, his horses winning $4,130. F. J. Pons, another owner who had been racing in Kentucky, came second with $1,780. Of seventy-five owners who shared in the distribution, the following thirty-seven were winners of $400 and over:

THE FAMOUS ASCOT GOLD CUP.

Notable Features in the History of the Greatest of Weight-for-Age Races.

That Royal Ascot is the greatest of race meetings is admitted by all. It possesses features peculiar to itself. We need not tell of improvements for this year's gathering—they are always improving at Ascot; it remains to add, however, that it annually matches a sight unique in Europe, perhaps in the world. We refer to the procession on Cup Day of fair women in the attire of the earlier days, from the stands to the luncheon tables. Is there a finer and braver sight? We know not! Opinions must differ as to what is the greatest race in the world according to the nationality of sportsmen of whom the question is asked. The average Englishman would most probably select the Derby; the Australian the Melbourne Cup, and the Frenchman give preference to the Grand Prix. There can be little doubt, however, that as a test of real equine merit the Ascot Cup is the garter of the turf. In the first place it is run over a distance of two miles and a half, which forms a test of staying power; second, it is a weight-for-age race, which provides for the best apportionment which experts can make; and in the third place, as no animal under three years of age can compete, immature racehorses are debarred from a race which is open to all.

Dumas, in one of his romances, mentions a horse "qui avait deux fois gagné le Derby." As the great race at Epsom is confined to three-year-olds this is a manifest absurdity.

In the Ascot Gold Cup, however, a victory does not impose a penalty, so that a superlative horse can win it as often as he has capacity to do so.

According to Sir Joseph Hawley, the race, which was founded in 1807, owed its origin to Lord George Cavendish and Squire Thornhill, of Riddlesworth. Suffering in its early years, owing to the life-and-death struggle we were having with Napoleon, and the commercial and financial panics following the fall of commanding genius, the cup really did not rank as a leading event until the early years of George IV.'s reign. Then Sir Mark Wood, having sold his pocket borough of Gattion, in Surrey, to Lord Oxburgh, because it commanded two seats in the House of Commons, at a fancy price, began to run in grand style. He opened the cup by winning three Ascot Cups in succession, that of 1831 with Lucetta, that of 1831 with Cetus, and that of 1832 with Carmine—all of them ridden by that fine horsemen, Jem Robinson, who was very successful at Ascot. The early thirties saw some excellent horses win the event, more notably Lord Chesterfield's four-year-old Glaucon, ridden by Bill Scott, in 1834; Lord Jersey's four-year-old Glenoe, ridden by Jem Robinson, in 1835; and in 1836 and 1837 the Marquis of Westminster's Touchstone. In the first year, as a five-year-old, he was ridden by John B. Day, and upon the second occasion by Bill Scott. "The Lucky Baronet" (Sir Joseph Hawley) was of opinion that horses winning in the year 1836 finished us with some of the most prepotent sires of the nineteenth century. In the Derby of that season the first six past the judge's chair were Bay Middleton, Gladiator, Venulus, Slane, Touchstone, and Rockingham.

That Sir Joseph spoke with sound sense is evidenced by the fact that from Rockingham came Miss Twickenham, the dam of Teddington, whose sire was Orlando, a son of Touchstone. To Bay Middleton he was indebted for his famous mares Aphrodite and Kalipyge; another of his Derby winners was Musjid, a son of Newminster, who was again a son of Touchstone; and from Mendicant, a daughter of Touchstone, he obtained a long list of winners in Beadsman, Blue Gown, Pero Gomez, and Green Sleeve. It is also to be noted that in The Flying Dutchman, a son of Bay Middleton; in Sweatmeal, a son of Gladiator; and Alarm, a son of Venison, we had three of the best stayers ever stripped on an English race course.

With that grand mare, Beeswing, belonging to Mr. Orde, won the Ascot Cup in 1812, beating Mr. Combe's The Nob, who was second. Mr. Pettit's St. Francis, third, and Mr. Kirby's Lanercost (which was poisoned) and Eringo, the popular horse of Thornhill, the scene at Newcastle-on-Tyne, where Mr. Orde lived, was never paralleled in that grimy town. Upon the arrival of the Edinburgh mail bearing the tidings of victory, "It might have been imagined," wrote the Rev. George Bigge, "that the population—more particularly that portion of it which ascended to the upper regions from the depths of many a dark coal pit—had gone mad. In the midst of the frantic enthusiasm, which exceeded the emotional display called forth years before by the crowning victory of Waterloo, the joy bells suddenly burst forth with clangorous volume from the oldest steeples. Not only, then, did women rush forth from their homes, and many a young lad from a factory in which she toiled to inquire what earth had happened. 'T'auld meen's woon 'Coop! 'T'auld meen's woon 'Coop!' There was no need to tell even the young children in that sporting hive of industry that 'T'auld meen' meant Beeswing, and that 'Coop' meant the Ascot Cup.

And here it may be remarked that in the seven-teenth century the custom of ringing church bells to celebrate the victory of a notable race horse was by no means unusual. Thus in the parish register of St. Edmund's Church, Salisbury, the following entry appears: "A. D. 1646. For ringing in the racehorse, that the Earl of Pembroke, his horse, did winne the Cuppe—five shillings and eight pence."

That the Ascot Cup in the forties was considered the most important race of the time was evidenced by its being chosen by the Emperor Nicholas of Russia to make a votive offering through it to our nation on the occasion of his visit to England in 1844.

On June 15, 1845, the Emperor's Plate was first run for at Ascot; previous to then the race had been known as the Ascot Gold Cup. The visit of the "Great White Czar" had made a wonderful impression in England, and was especially reflected on the turf, as not only was the name of the Ascot Cup changed, but two other races, the Cesarewitch and Grand Duke Michael Stakes, were inaugurated in honor of the Imperial family. The Ascot event was endowed by the reigning Romanoff with what at the time was considered the enormous sum of £500 per annum, and in consequence the name of the race was changed to the Emperor's Plate until the outbreak of the Crimean war, when the original title was reverted to, but those of the other two events remained unaltered.

In the first race for the Plate the omen-lovers were furnished with a theme by the victory of a horse called The Emperor, which beat such great opponents as Alice Hawthorn and Faugh-a-Ballagh, much to the astonishment of the racing world, as the owner of the last-named horse believed him to be invincible. The trophy which Lord Albermarle received on that occasion was a massive piece of silver plate, the valuable feature of which was a model of the gigantic statue of Peter the Great at St. Petersburg, part of the granite upon which that statue stands being used for the pedestal. The model of the statue, and piece of granite were placed upon a triangular base with basso reliefs of "the Imperial Palace of St. Petersburg," "The Kremlin, Moscow," and "Windsor Castle." Upon the base were models of three Russian soldiers, a cuirassier, a cossack, and a circassian; all three of the Imperial Guard. The trophy was forty inches in height and weighed 600 ounces.

In the opinion of General Brialmont, one of the ablest engineers in the Belgian Army, or in Europe, the matter of that, the Czar's visit to this country was inspired by ulterior motives; and that which he gave him, confirmed his suspicion, for little did he think of the rough and ready style of the regiments which he saw reviewed in Windsor Park, that visions of making Constantinople a Russian capital and the Black Sea a Russian lake floated before his enchanted eyes from that moment."

Old race-goers considered the Ascot Cup of 1850 as one of the finest of their day. This is possibly correct, as it was won by a stayer of all time—The Flying Dutchman—which, as a four-year-old, made an awful example of Jericho, Canezou, Little Jack, and Peep-o'-Day, winning in a canter by eight lengths.

On the other hand, Sir Joseph Hawley was wont to assert that the last race for the Emperor's Plate in June, 1853, was the greatest and grandest struggle between two good horses that he ever saw. The pair were Mr. Stanley's Teddington, five years, ridden by J. Marsden, and Lord Exeter's Stockwell, four years, ridden by Norman. They had Ninnyhammer, Defiance, Lady Evelyn, Kingston and The Indian Warrior behind them. The finish in this race was extraordinary. At the distance Stockwell and Teddington came on together to the lower end of the enclosure, where Teddington took a lead of half a length, which, after an exciting struggle, he maintained until a dozen strides from home, when, running out to the left, Stockwell almost succeeded in reaching him. Marsden was obliged to use both whip and spur on the left side to land his horse, the winner by a head. This was a fitting close to the Emperor of Russia's cup; and a year or two later our troops administered the quietus to his territorial ambitions.

Renowned as this great race is for the quality of the fields which contest it, perhaps the fact was never more in evidence than when Bolard was successful in 1874. He had previously won the Grand Prix and French Derby, and he was followed home on this occasion by Doncaster (winner of the Derby, third in the Grand Prix and second in the St. Leger). Doncaster ran a dead heat for second place with Flageolet (second in the Grand Prix and French Derby); Kaiser (second in the Two Thousand Guineas and third in Derby and St. Leger) was fourth; behind the four being Marie Stuart (winner of Oaks and St. Leger) and Gang Forward (winner of the Two Thousand Guineas and second in the Derby).—London Sporting Life.
